SETTLES WITH RAILROAD COMPANY

After spending seven days in the city jail George Thatcher, the young man who confessed to defrauding the railroad of his fare between Cache Junction and Ogden last Tuesday, because he was ill and hungry, was released this morning. A sentence of seven days was pronounced by Judge Reeder with time deducted. He had written to his home in Salt Lake for money and announced that he was ready to pay the Oregon Short Line company for his transportation. A patrolman accompanied Thatcher to the ticket office where he handed the ticket agent $1.50, which is the fare from Cache Junction to Ogden. He was told, however, that he would be obliged to pay $2.50, as excess fare is charged when such conditions arise. This raise in price necessitated another trip to the police station, but the fare was finally paid and the young man left for his home in Salt Lake.

MORE CHARGES AGAINST HANSON

Frank Hanson, who was at one time the postmaster at Fillmore, was arraigned in police court this morning on the charge of petty larceny. He is charged with stealing a pair of gloves from a 13-year-old boy named Arthur Hansen. He pleaded not guilty to the charge and his case was set for tomorrow. His bail was placed at $15 which he promptly deposited with the sergeant. He had hardly left the station when a telephone message came that a check that had been cashed by Hanson Saturday night was found to be worthless. The officers are now hot on his trail.

Hanson was arrested Saturday night and the officers cannot understand why he should have taken the gloves. When searched at the station, he had $127 in bills and gold in his wallet. In court this morning, he muttered something about believing that the gloves belonged to a nephew of his, but as he had pleaded not guilty he was not allowed to testify at this time.

The mental condition of the accused may be inquired into by the authorities.

HE DIES WITHOUT SEEING MOTHER

Young Man Passes Away on a Train Coming Into Ogden, on Which He Was Traveling in Hope of Meeting His Mother in Ogden Before the End Came—Body Taken From Train by Undertaker.

Neither the promise of a dying son to see his mother before the coming of the end nor the promise of the mother to meet her young son in Ogden upon his arrival from a sanitarium in California, were fulfilled this morning. The body of the son is lying at the Kirkendall morgue, a victim of the great white plague while the mother is believed to be in Denver.

The son, John M. McNulty, died on a Southern Pacific train shortly after 6 o'clock this morning shortly before the train arrived in Ogden. In his pockets were found letters and a telegram from his mother which read:

"Will meet you in Ogden, February 3. (Signed) Mother."

The telegram was addressed to John McNulty, Potentier sanitarium, Monrovia, Cal., and was sent from the Denver office of the Western Union Telegraph company. The young man was in the last stages of tuberculosis and evidently knew he was dying and desired to see his mother. In his pocket was a receipted bill for $165 for care received while a patient at the sanitarium.

The train crew placed him in a berth when it became known that he was dying and the end came shortly before his arrival in Ogden. In place of his mother at the depot, the undertaker was waiting.

The young man bore cards showing that he was a member of the Eagles and Moose lodges at Goldfield, Nev. The undertaker is now endeavoring to locate the mother in Denver.

paring for lawns and shrubbery on the exposition grounds. They drill holes with sledges and drills, about four feet deep, and place dynamite in the holes and then touch off the explosives. Thus the place is plowed.

The soil here is a decomposed sandstone, mixed with clay which seems to nearly as hard as cement. There are more automobiles in this city than in any other of its size and the roads are excellent with no dust. The soil seems to be so heavy that it will not raise in the air.

Give Children Definite Tasks.

He said that boys and girls should be given something definite to do during the home years and should be considered as partners in the home productivity and not as servants who are given food and clothing in return for labor. Money allowances, he said, should be generally avoided or if made should be followed up to see that good use is made of the money. He pointed out that children who have large allowances do not know the value of money, but he maintained that spending money should be given as in that way they will learn to know the value in business.

He urged fair treatment of children stating that their minds are most delicate and can easily be injured beyond repair. He said that each child needed different handling and the parents should make a study of each child with the view to administering to its future welfare with the greatest wisdom.
